and follow Santa's delivery path to featured countries such as France, UK, India, China, Mexico and Holland.

The festival runs until January 6, 2019 and the organizers expect more than 100,000 people to visit. "Glow's indoor setup is ideal for guests to experience our festival in comfortable temperatures, while enjoying playgrounds designed to entertain, and touring the illuminated sculptures and backdrops that are perfect for selfies and family holiday photos," Lawrence Jansen, CEO of Davonda Nurseries, the organizer said in a press release.

Women In Policing - Jenna's Story

It all started back in grade 11 while taking a law course. That was the spark that ignited Jenna Downs interest in becoming a police officer. That interest was so strong that now Jenna is a Sheridan College student taking Police Foundations at the Davis Campus in the City of Brampton.

On Saturday, November 24, 2018, Peel Regional Police hosted a "Women in Policing" event. Over 80 interested women participated and Jenna was one of them.

"Policing was traditionally known male dominated career, so days like today really help to boost my confidence that I can become a police officer," says Jenna.

There are many things that appeal to Jenna, but the wide variety of roles really spoke to her. "You can be a K9 officer or go into Forensics, there are so many different opportunities... Every day you end up doing something different."

Constable Nancy Vellenga from the Uniform Outreach Bureau was instrumental in organizing the day's event. "The goal is to empower these females and give them the confidence to see policing as a career."

Female applications to be an officer increased by 176 percent in 2017 when compared to 2016, according to the Peel Regional Police 2017 Annual Report.

Participants saw demonstrations in Forensics, K9, and got to participate in some fitness testing, defensive tactics, and role play in scenarios that officers deal with.

Jenna said: "It was great to meet women police officers and hear from them on their successes and different areas of policing. I am looking forward to helping my community be a better and safer place."
