

Meet The Exclusive Nissan GT-R50 By Italdesign

Nissan has confirmed the production design of the Nissan GT-R50 by Italdesign – the ultimate expression of the GT-R – and has opened the official order books for the 50-vehicle limited run.

The car's exterior is virtually unchanged from the prototype first shown in July at the Goodwood Festival of Speed in England. Pricing of the NISMO-tuned, 710-horsepower, GT-R by Italdesign will start at $1.5-million before taxes and options.

Nissan collaborated with Italdesign (based out of Turin, Italy) to create the model, which is built on the latest Nissan GT-R NISMO, in commemoration of the 50th anniversaries of the GT-R in 2019 and Italdesign in 2018. While the prototype vehicle was finished in a special gray with gold accents, customers will be able to specify their preferred color combinations for the production version. They also will be able to choose interior colors and packages.

In addition to Goodwood, the GT-R50 prototype has made appearances at Spa-Francorchamps in Belgium, the Rolex Monterey Motorsports Reunion in the U.S. and Nissan Crossing in Tokyo's Ginza district.

"The reaction from Nissan fans around the world – and potential customers of the GT-R50 – has greatly exceeded our expectations," said Bob Laishley, global sports car program director at Nissan. "These 50 cars, which celebrate 50 years of the GT-R as well as 50 years of Italdesign, will be rolling tributes to Nissan's engineering leadership and rich sports car heritage for a long time to come." Customers who wish to own a GT-R50 may start by visiting www.gt-r50.nissan and contacting Italdesign to create their own bespoke car. Deliveries will begin in 2019 and will continue through 2020.

What Grandparents Need To Know About Car Seats

Every family needs help sometimes, and grandparents are a wonderful resource for many. Despite their enthusiasm to help with after-school pickup or take the kids for a day of fun, a lot has changed from the time they were transporting children.

A 2018 survey found that four out of 10 parents are concerned that secondary caregivers will not install or buckle the car seat correctly. Follow these tips when selecting a car seat for grandparents to use.

Proper installation. Ensure grandparents know how to check for a proper install. Key checkpoints include: removing excess slack in the harness straps and at the belt-path; ensuring the base of the car seat is a minimum of 80 per cent on the vehicle; positioning the chest clip at armpit level; using the level indicator and; verifying the harness so straps are at the appropriate height, whether rear or forward-facing.

Always use the manufacturer's installation directions to install the seat safely and properly. When in doubt, find a local certified car seat technician or car seat clinic to have your installation verified.

Longevity is a priority. Make grandparents' lives easier by selecting a car seat that will grow with your child, like Graco's Extend2Fit Convertible Car Seat. It features a four-position extension panel that provides five inches of extra legroom. The seat also makes switching from rear facing to front facing super easy so parents and grandparents can feel confident that children are comfortable and safe for all the car rides ahead.
